Those business men who took the $2,500 stock in the State Trust Company to secure the opening of the bank by the company are threatening to attach the property of the bank, in order to secure themselves. However, their claims would have to come after the depositors. Such procedure would necessitate a court adjustment of the affairs of the bank and result in a considerable tie-up of the whole matters. The purchasers of the stock in the States Trust Company, the members of the Corporation Commission say, will lose most heavily in this banking scheme, which the commissioners believe would have touched North Carolinians for something like $1,000,000 if sieps against it had been delayed a few months longer. W. O. Tarver, president of the States Trust Company, was registered at a hotel here last night, but left on an early train, without having any conference with the commissioners.
